CLASS COMMITTEE.

FRANCIS HENRY LINCOLN,
Class Secretary.

GEORGE COMBE MANN.

Classmates:

Thirty-five years after graduation finds us with numbers still further decreased by the deaths of Dudley, Fay, J. C. Jackson, Parker, Stacy, and Parrish.

I have included in this report only the record of the past five years, and each successive report should be regarded as supplementary to those which have preceded it. Only for the purpose of correction, or of adding facts not previously printed, have I departed from this plan.

A greater number than usual have made prompt answers to my questions, for which I thank you. I believe there is no one among the living graduates of the Class whose abiding place is unknown to the Secretary.

I give you all my best wishes for many years of health and happiness.

FRANCIS HENRY LINCOLN,

Class Secretary.

He alluded, with great satisfaction, to the fact that his children were connected with the college or with Radcliffe. No member of the Class was more loyal to its interests or more cordial in his affection for his classmates. *CLEMENT KELSEY FAY.

Born in Brookline, Mass., November 17, 1845. Died in Brookline, March 15, 1898.

He was the son of Harrison and Sarah [Kelsey] Fay. His ancestry dates back to David Fay, a resident of Marlborough, Mass., in 1658. His great-grandfather, Captain, afterwards Major, Josiah Fay, commanded a company of "Minute Men" from Southborough in the Revolution, and served also with distinction in the battles of Bunker Hill and White Plains, in the latter of which engagements he was wounded. Clement lived in Brookline all his life, received his early education in the public schools, passed through all the grades from primary to high school, and entered college in 1863.

While in college he was a member of the Christian Brethren, Institute, Hasty Pudding, and Glee Clubs. He was Odist of the Sophomore Class Supper, and Class Chorister on Class Day. After graduation, he studied law in Boston, was admitted to the bar in 1869, and through the remainder of his life practised his profession in Boston.

He held the following offices: Representative to the General Court of Massachusetts, 1885 and 1886; Commissioner of Prisons for Massachusetts; Trustee and Vice-President of the Brookline Savings Bank; Trustee of the Episcopal Theological School of Cambridge; one of the Board of Managers of the Massachusetts Charitable Eye and Ear Infirmary; President of the Massachusetts Society of the Sons of the Revolution; Senior Warden of St. Paul's Church, Brookline, which church he joined at the age of fourteen.

He was the author of some printed arguments and musical compositions.

From 1863 to 1896 he was the organist of St. Paul's Church, Brookline, giving his services without compensation in loyalty to the church to which he was so much attached.

He made thirteen summer trips to Europe and one to Santo Domingo.

He attended the Class supper the night before Commencement in 1897, and was in Cambridge on the following day. A few days later an affection of the heart confined him to his room, where he remained a patient and cheerful sufferer for over eight months. He died suddenly while dictating a letter. He was never married.

The following tribute, written by our classmate Hoar, appeared in the Boston Transcript of March 19, 1898:—

When a definite and recognized amount of affection and gentleness is removed from the sum of human kindness, the world seems to survivors much the less worth living in. It is hardly possible to allow the death of a character like Clement Fay to pass without notice. From boyhood he was independent, not only of the combinations of others, but also of his own preconceived opinions. This was a rare quality, which marked him through a life, alas, too short. From both parents he inherited a courteous deference to the opinions, as well as the statements, of others, yet he never allowed himself to be led from the path of righteous conduct by hope of gain or fear of obloquy.

His independence was noteworthy and peculiar. It led him to scan his own conduct and opinions as well as those of his fellows, and therefore, frequently and without pride or partisanship, to recast his views and purposes to adapt them to the changing conditions of the times.

His disposition was kindly and tender. Some woman, it will never be known who, lost in him an intimate associate of rare affection, for he ever devoted himself to his kindred alone.

In public life the questions to which he addressed his powers were those in which he became recognized as an advocate of acknowledged force, because his advocacy was backed by disinterested zeal and public spirit.

He was possessed of a lively and constantly recurrent humor which never wounded, and a keen intellectual appreciation which never missed its object.

He was a sweet singer, and a writer, as well as an appreciative exponent of instrumental music, a kind friend, a thoughtful, generous gentleman.

It was his fate to die before he had reached the allotted span of life, and to endure without complaint a wasting sickness, leading unerringly to certain death. He had a calm religious faith, a cheerful and courageous view of life, and had faithfully run his course. It may well be said of him, that : —

" When Death transplanted him to his place in the Garden of the Lord he found little that was perishable to prune away."

Here he remained for ten years, and then became the treasurer, secretary, and general agent of the American Linen Thread Company, in Mechanicsville, N. Y. In 1880 he gave up mercantile pursuits and went to Europe to study metallurgical engineering, thus taking up the work he had intended to devote himself to earlier in life. WILLIAM JAMES MORTON. Born 1845.

Physician in New York. Professor of Electro-Therapeutics and of Diseases of the Mind and Nervous System in the New York Post-Graduate School and Hospital.

In 1881, Dr. Morton devised a mechanism consisting of a Holz or influence machine, and Leyden jars, by means of which a new order of electric current was established, and termed "the static induced current." At that time, and again in 1891, he called attention to the peculiar physiological effects produced by the current. In 1892 and subsequently, Nicola Tesla developed the wonderful physical effects known as the "Tesla effects," employing Dr. Morton's current and mechanism for its production. Professors Elihu Thomson, and d'Aesonval of Paris, were also much interested in the physiological effects of his current, the development of which marks an epoch in electro-therapeutics as well as in general electrical science and art. It affects the nutritional processes of the living organism in a much higher degree than any other form of electrical current, and it produces the etheric wave light effects of luminosity without conductors.

In their report on the Physiological and Therapeutical Properties of High Frequency and High Tension Currents, Messrs. E. Doumer and P. Oudin (Comptes Rendus des Séances du premier Congrès International d'Électrologie et de Radiologie Médicales, Paris, July 27, August 1, 1900, published at Lille, 1901, pages 144–145), speak as follows: "As early as the year 1881 Morton made known 'A new induction current in electricity.'" He approximated the balls of the exploder of a Holtz machine until the sparks appeared between them, and intercalated his patients in a circuit running from the external plates of the condensers.

For a long time Henry, Feddersen, Helmholtz and others had mentioned the oscillating character of the disruptive spark of the discharge of condensers, but this property had not yet been mentioned as capable of utilization for the increase of the frequency of an alternating current; Morton was thus the first to produce therapeutical high frequency, somewhat without knowing it.

When, somewhat later, Hertz in 1887, Lodge in 1888, had published their so remarkable works, Morton saw that, with his arrangement, he subjected the patient to oscillations of an enormous frequency and relatively short wave-length. This he set forth in his work of January, 1891, on "The Interrupted Franklinic Current."

It can be said, in all justice, that with the first work of Morton was developed the method of electrization by high frequency currents.

In 1896 a book by him was published, entitled "The X-Ray or Photography of the Invisible."

In 1894 he discovered an electro-chemical method of staining tissues preparatory to microscopical examination, an account of which was published in the Transactions of the American Electro-Therapeutical Association.

Following up his work put forth in the treatise published in 1896, Dr. Morton has continuously devoted much study to the subject of the X-ray and its application to the treatment of disease. Recently such studies have assumed a peculiar interest all over the world in their special relation to the treatment of cancer. And Dr. Morton is now busily engaged in working upon these new problems. He has recently published an article entitled "The Treatment of Malignant Growths by the X-Ray, with a Provisional Report on Cases Under Treatment." And a second article entitled "Radiotherapy for Cancer and Other Diseases."

When possible, and in intervals of practice, he spends his time upon his farm at Sag Harbor, Long Island. The farm is a small island, near the town, of about one hundred acres in extent, and offering the advantages of a little wilderness and fisherman's life, with boating and fishing opportunities thrown in. He has little to say except that life apparently consists of hard work with a few oases thrown in for pleasure.

Stacy was constant in his attendance at all Class gatherings. He had a strong feeling of loyalty to our Class, and his was always a kindly cordial greeting to all his classmates. Died in Colorado Springs, Colo., November 7, 1899.

The following notice is taken from the Colorado Springs Evening Telegraph: —

Thomas C. Parrish, one of the best known and most respected men of the city, died at 11 o'clock this morning at his home, 209 North Weber Street, from a stroke of apoplexy suffered yesterday. The news of the death of Mr. Parrish will come as a great shock to his hundreds of friends in Colorado Springs, for he was one of the most generally beloved men in the city.

Mr. Parrish was fifty-two years of age, and came to Colorado Springs in 1872, just after the town had been laid off. His relatives, as well as himself, were largely interested in the Colorado Springs Company, and he watched the little town of a few scattering houses grow into the present handsome city. About twelve years ago Mr. Parrish married Miss Lodge, of Wilmington, Del., who, with two children, a boy and a girl, survives him.

Mr. Parrish was stricken yesterday morning, while at work in his office in the Hagerman building, and was immediately taken home. Although everything possible was done to save him, it was without avail, and he steadily sank until the end came this morning about 11 o'clock. He was surrounded by his wife and children and his brother, Frank Parrish, who had come down from Leadville.

Mr. Parrish was engaged in mining in various parts of the State, and while residing in Custer County was elected to the State Senate. Later, in 1883, he was a candidate for State Senator in this county, but was defeated by Mr. Irving Howbert. Mr. Parrish was also largely instrumental in bringing the Cripple Creek gold camp before the public, and in 1891 went to the camp with Count Pourtales and took a bond on the Buena Vista claim, which is now a part of the Isabella property. This was before the big boom at the camp, and Mr. Parrish did much toward bringing the district into favorable consideration.

Mr. Parrish was an artist of no mean ability, as is his wife, and his paintings and etchings have attracted much favorable comment. He was prominently identified with the El Paso Club, and three years ago, when the Gazette was reorganized, he was one of the active members of the company. A year later, however, he retired, and of late devoted himself almost exclusively to his business.

CLASS OF 1867 SCHOLARSHIP.

Our classmate, Samuel Hoar, acted for the executor of the will of Robert Treat Paine, late of Brookline, and whatever fee he received would diminish the amount to be ultimately paid to the College under the will. He was paid two thousand dollars, and disposed of it June 1, 1886, as follows: —

"I give to the President and Fellows of Harvard College the sum of two thousand dollars, to be by them invested and the income thereof annually added to the principal, until the principal shall be thereby increased to twenty-five hundred dollars; and thereafter the net income shall be annually paid at or near the beginning of the second half of each College year, to some member of the Freshman Class, in the Academic Department of Harvard College, who shall seem to the said President and Fellows meritorious and in need of assistance.

"Said fund and the accumulation and income shall be known as the Class of 1867 Scholarship, and in the distribution of the income thereof, children or grandchildren of members of the Class of 1867 of Harvard College, who are deemed worthy, shall be preferred."

The fund was increased by subscriptions from other classmates amounting to $515.86, in 1887 and 1888, and a legacy of $1,000 from Clement Kelsey Fay, in 1898, making a total of $3,515.86 paid to the College. According to the last annual statement of the Treasurer of Harvard College, the fund amounted to $4,622.91, and is available for the purposes for which it was established.

The following is an extract from the will of Clement Kelsey Fay: —

"I give to the President and Fellows of Harvard College one thousand dollars, to be added by them to the principal of the Class of 1867 Scholarship Fund, originally created by my classmate, Samuel Hoar, Esquire, and to be held by them upon the same trust and for the uses specified in his original gift."
